Art And Music To Be Studied On Television By County Students

Three half-hour television lessons in art and three in music will be given next February for elementary school students of Appomattox County as an experiment to see if such courses can be taught by television instruction.

School Supt. Earl Smith made this announcement following a meeting in Lynchburg Monday, Dec. 10, of representatives of the seven school systems which sponsor the educational television course in science over WLVA TV, Channel 13.

According to his report of the meeting, the participating school systems will contribute about $30 each for television time for the art and music lessons.

Miss Julia Mahood, art supervisor for Lynchburg schools will conduct the art lessons, and either John L. Bach or Mary A. Jefferson, music supervisors for Lynchburg schools will conduct the television music lessons. Both will be telecast over WLVA-TV once a week.

Smith said the fine arts lessons would be designed primarily for the sixth grade.

If the music and art television courses are found to be worthwhile, representatives of the participating school systems will probably recommend to their school boards the expansion of the current educational television program.

The current program is a seventh grade science course conducted for a half hour three times a week by James Earl, coordinator of elementary education for Lynchburg schools.

Earl made a report during the meeting on tests given to the seventh grade science students and on evaluations made by the teachers.

Earl said pupils had scored better on each succeeding test and that the teachers' comments had also been more favorable with each evaluation he had requested.

The major criticism, he said, was that the visual aids used during the television science course were not as effective as they were supposed to be.

"This will be improved," Earl said, "As far as the content of the course, we'll probably start with something concrete (next year), something they're familiar with."

He said the course would begin with a discussion of something such as rocks or the weather, instead of astronomy.

The science course started Sept. 11 and is telecast every Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday morning.

Rescue Squad Meets Thurs.

The regular meeting of the Rescue Squad of Appomattox will be held on Dec. 27, (Thursday) because of the Christmas holidays. Rescue Squad members are distributing safety posters in an effort to cut down holiday traffic accidents, according to the Rescue Squad reporter.

All members are urged to be present for the Dec. 27 meeting.
